Consultation Questions About Student Behavior

When you consult with UW resources, you will be asked about the student’s behavior. To make consultation most effective, consider the following questions in advance of your call:

1. What did the student do?
2. What did the student say?
3. Who observed these behaviors or witnessed these statements?
4. What impact does the student’s behavior appear to be having on other students, faculty, or staff?
5. Have you tried to talk directly with the student and, if so, what outcomes emerged from that conversation?
