TRAUMA AND VICTIMS OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING

Rosia Aning
Interdisciplinary Concentration: Law, Diversity & Justice – Immigration and Human Rights
Dr. Babafemi Akinrinade
Western Washington University
Introduction

What is Human Trafficking?

My research question?

• Traumatic Experiences: What Does Trauma Look Like For Those Who Have Been Trafficked?

The main focus of my research
Framework

1. Understanding the experiences of victims of human trafficking
2. Examining the stages of trafficking
3. Exploring the factors contributing to vulnerability
4. Investigating the aftermath and support for victims
Methodology

- Policy analysis
  - Comparative
  - Literature review and secondary data
Results

Vulnerability factors increases the risk of human trafficking.

Victims of trafficking endure control, helplessness, and powerlessness.

The process inflicts severe physical and psychological harm.

Challenges arise due to stigma and limited support.
REFERENCES

- Sesan, Stages of The Trafficking Process, Destination stage (2021), https://end-trafficking.org/2021/05/26/stages-of-the-trafficking-process/

- People smuggling – the issues, INTERPOL, https://www.interpol.int/en/Crimes/People-smuggling/People-smuggling-the-issues#:~:text=While%20some%20migrants%20and%20smugglers%20make%20contact%20face-to-face,information%20on%20routes%20and%20advertise%20their%20services

- Siddharth Kara, Sex trafficking inside the business of modern slavery (2017), p.3

- Siddharth Kara, Sex trafficking inside the business of modern slavery (2017), p.14

