Let's dive into the story of a 250-foot long illuminated bit of awesomeness. Back in 1909, during the Alaska Yukon Pacific Exposition in Seattle, this incredible sign emerged, beckoning people to venture south from the shores of Lake Washington. Talk about some A+ trolling!

Fast forward to 2019, artist John James Nelson decided to put a modern twist on this iconic sign, setting it up on old pilings near Titlow Beach. It's a beautiful blend of old and new, just like the UW Tacoma campus.

Whether you're a fan of history or a lover of contemporary art, one thing's for sure— from its rich past to its vibrant present, Tacoma has something for everyone.
