

UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON

Following a successful first year for University of Washington faculty, post-docs, and graduate students, UW has renewed its institutional membership with the National Center for Faculty Development and Diversity—now is the time to join your colleagues in taking advantage of this terrific resource!

About the NCFDD

The NCFDD provides year-round access to a community of mentors who help support the success of University of Washington faculty, post-docs, and graduate students. The NCFDD offers concrete, empirically-tested strategies for increasing productivity through, for example, online training workshops facilitated by experts on faculty development and a “Monday Motivator” weekly newsletter.

New for UW Faculty this year: Join your peers for on-campus viewings of NCFDD webinars and workshops and engage in discussions on key issues and best practices!

Benefits include:

- Intensive online training and mentoring
- Tips and techniques for securing external funding for your research
- Online professional development workshops
- Access to moderated writing challenges each month
- Access to multi-week courses each term

To activate your NCFDD University of Washington membership account:

Send an email to Norma Rodriguez (normar@uw.edu), Director in the Office for Faculty Advancement, with the following information:

1. Your full name;
2. Your UW email address;
3. Your department or school;
4. Your title/rank (e.g., faculty, post-doc, graduate student).

Within a few business days you will receive an email from the NCFDD welcoming you to the Center and confirming your account activation.

Additional information about the NCFDD and its resources is available at www.facultydiversity.org.
